"I'm sorry sir," the cashier contested, "but you are limited to one bag of charcoal with a ten dollar purchase." "Yeah, I know," retorted Craig. "That's why I didn't buy ten dollars worth of goods—I didn't want to be limited to one bag of charcoal!" The confused cashier rang up ten bags of charcoal at the sale price.

THE WAITRESS

I was in a restaurant the other day.

Finally the waitress arrived and asked,

"You been waiting long?"

"I always wondered what they did with those CHICKEN HEADS."

She poured me a cup of coffee.

"This coffee tastes like mud!"

I exclaimed.

"It should," she responded,

"It was GROUND this morning."

There was a fly in my soup,

so I queried,

"What's that fly doing in my soup?"

"Well, I don't rightly know,"

she replied,

"But it looks like the breast stroke."

Later she asked for a tip.

"Don't play the horses,"

I advised.

"I wouldn't bet on it,"

she countered.
